Gwendholen, daughter of Corineus, was wife to Locryn: shee after the death of her husband, during the nonage of her sonne Madank, ruled this land xv. yeeres: but her sonn being once able to gouern, she rendred the kingdom vnto him, & contented herselfe only with Cornwal which was her inheritance.

Madank, the son of Locryn, tooke vpon him the gouernment of this land, which he ruled peaceably forty yeeres, & died, leauing behind him two sonnes, Mynyr and Maul.

Cāber the 2. son of Brutus, according to his fathers alot mēt took vnto him selfe that western part of this Ile, which at this day is called Kymbry. Hee had issue, two sonnes, Gorbonian and Albon, who deuided Cambria betweene them:

Gorboniā, the eldest son of Cāber, after the death of Gwendholen had the Dukedom of Corinwall giuen vnto him. he had issue his son Dynwal hē D. of Cornwal.

Albon the 2. sonne of Cāber contented himselfe with his portion in Cābria, which I take to bee a great portion thereof. He had issue his sonne Anny.

A

Mynyr, eldest son of Madauke, Maul, second son after the death of his father, fell at debate with his brother Maul about the gouernmēt; but Mynyr making a fained peace with his brother, caused him to be murdered; & fearing reuenge, he caused most of his Nobles to be put to death. He forsooke his wife, and fell to the sinne of Sodomy: and when he had raigned xx. yeeres, going a hunting, he lost his company, & in a wooddy vale, hee was set vpon by a company of furious Woolues, which deuoured him: he left his son Enrogg to succeed him in the kingdome.

I

Enrogg cadarn, or Enrogg the strong, the sonne of Mynyr, after his fathers death, was K. of this land. He sayled with an army into France, subdued the Countrey, and returned home with great riches and tryumph. He had twenty sonnes, and thirty daughters. He builded Caereurogg, Caeralclyd, and the Castle of Maydens, vpon the mountayne of Sorow: and when he had raigned 60. yeeres, hee dyed, leauing his sonne Erutus Tarrianlas to succeed him.

though, as you may perceyue by this Genealogy, he was the rightfull heire of the whole kingdome, yet his part was least, for that might ouercame right for the time: he being forced thereunto, contented himselfe therewith, vntill fortune should afford him better succeſſe, and so died, leauing behind him a sonne, called Dysnwall Moelmud, which is as much to say, as Dumbald Dysnwall.

Dysnwall Moelmud, the sonne of Clydno, being a valiant Gentleman, after the death of his father, gathered the best forces he could, and entring into Loegria, fought with Pynnor, and slue him in battel: after whose death, Kydianc, King of Kimry, or Wales, and Statter, King of North-Vmbria, bestirring themselves, ioyned their forces, and entring into the lands of Dysnwall, burnt and wasted the same, whereof Dysnwall being aduertized, made against them with ten thousand armed soldiers, and bid them battell, in the which, by his manhood and warlike policy, hee gate the victory, and slue them both, and so recouered the whole kingdome, and being absolutely possesst thereof, he made a Crowne of gold, and did weare it. He made many good lawes, which are yet extant, though not in vse. He gaue Priuiledges to Temples, Cities and Ploughes, and to high wayes leading to the same, that whosoever had need therof, might repayre thither, & be safe. He brought the land so ciuil by his good gouernment, that none durst oppresse another: he raigned 40. yeres after the time he was crowned

Arth, the son of Meirion, after the death of his father, had his fathers portion of Cābria, & gouerned the same many yeeres, & had issue, a sonne, called

King, and then dyed, and was buried in the Temple of peace, which he in his life time had builded, and had issue 2. sonnes Beli and Bran.

Beli, or Belinus, the eldest son of Dyfnwall Moelud, after the death of his father, had the greater part of Brittain allotted vnto him: he tooke Gwythlach K. of Dēmark prisoner, being wind-driven into Brittain, & made him tributary. His brother Bran, invading Britain with an army of Norwegians, was by Beli vanquished, & 15000. of his men slayne: and the same Bran, invading Brittain the second time with an army of Burgomans, was by the meanes of their mother Tāwen, reconciled to his brother, and they both ioyning their armies, entered into France, subdued it, and made the kings thereof tributary to the Brittaines: & going to Rome, won the City, which he left vnto his brother, and he himselfe returning home, builded the City of Caerlbeon vpo Wysk, & Belinesgate in London, where his ashes were hanged in brasse, after the Pagan maner, after he died, and had reigned 26. whole yeres.

Gwrgan farfwrch, sonne of Beli, after the death of his father, was K. of Brittain: he sayled into Denmark, to recouer the tribute, which was withholden from him, subdued them, slue their K. & made them tributaries a-Spanish ships, whose Captaine was called Bartholomie, who with his people wanted place to inhabit, vnto whō Gwrgan gaue the Ile of Ireland to hold of him & of his heires and successors for euer: and after he had raigned 19. yeres, he died, and was buried at Caerlheon vpon Wysk, which City he had beautified and fortified in his lifetime.

Kybelyn, the son of Gwrgan, after the death of his father, was made king of Brittain, & ruled the same peaceably. He married one Marcia, a noble & learned Gentlewoman, who made lawes, which of her name are to this day called Marcia lawes. They were turned out of the British toūg into English, by Alfred, ma, wife to Kybelyn, gouer K. of England: and when he had raigned 27. yeres; he died, & was buried at the city of Troy newyth.

Siffylt, the sonne of Kybelyn, succeeded his father in the kingdome: he was but seuen yeres olde when he was made king; but the land was gouerned by his mother, during his minority. He raigned in all seuen yeres, and then dyed, and was buryed at Troy newyth. He had issue 2. sonnes, Kynsarch, which succeeded him in the kingdon, and Dan, his youngest sonne.

Kynsarch, the eldest son of Siffylt, after the death of his father, was K. of Brittain. He was much giuen to lust. He was slayne by his enemies as hee was hunting, when he had raigned three yeres, and died without issue.

Gornst, the sonne of Khydo, after his father, tooke vpon him the rule of this land, and ruled the same 3. yeeres, and dyed, leauing the kingdome to his sonne Meyriawn.

Meyriawn, the son of Gornst, was after his father, king. He gouerned this land two yeeres, and died, leauing the kingdome to his sonne Bledbut.

Bledbut, the sonne of Meyriawn, when his father was dead, receiued the royall scepter, and held the same two yeres, and then dyed, leauing the kingdome to his sonne Caph.

Caph, the son of Bledbut, hauing buried his father, gouerned this land 3. yeres, and then died, leauing the kingdome to his sonne Owen.

Owen, the son of Caph, was after his father, king of Brittain, and when he had ruled the same 2. yeres, he died, and left the kingdome to his sonne Sissylht.

Sissylht, the son of Owen, after the death of his father, took the gouernment of the land vpon him, and ruled the same 2. yeeres, and dyed, leauing behind him two sonnes, Blegwryd and Archmael, and a daughter called Agasia.

Blegwryd, the first son of Sissylht, was after the decease of his father king of Brittain twenty yeeres. He was the best Musician of that time, and therefore was called, The God of pastimes. He dyed without issue.

Rydion, the sonne of Eddol, after the death of his father, was made king of this land. He reigned two yeeres, and dyed, leauing the kingdome to his sonne Rydberch.

Rydberch, sonne of Rydion, after the death of his father, tooke vpon him the gouernment of the Realme: he ruled the same three yeeres, and dyed, leauing the rule to his sonne Sawyl Penissel.

Sawyl Penissel, that is, Sawl with the low head, the sonne of Rydberch, after the death of his father, ruled Brittainne foure yeeres, and then dyed, leauing the kingdome to his sonne Pyrr.

Pyrr, the sonne of Sawyl, after the death of his father, reigned ouer this land two yeres, and dyed, leauing the kingdome to his sonne Kapoir.

Kapoir, the sonne of Pyrr, after the death of his father, was made king: he gouerned the Realme two yeres, and dyed, leauing the rule to his sonne Mynogen.

Mynogen, the sonne of Kapoir, after the death of his father, tooke vpon him the gouernment of this land, and ruled the same wisely and vertuously foure yeeres, and then dyed, leauing the kingdome to his sonne Bel.

Bel, the sonne of Mynogen, called of the Brittaines, Belus Mawr, that is to say, Belus the great, after the death of his father, was made King of this land. Of this Belus Mawr, or Belus the great, most of our ancient Brittainish Genealogies take their originall, as a chiefe roote, whereof grew that toy, that the Welsh men deriue their Pedegrees from the blessed Virgin Mary, because in our Genealogies, his name is most often written with B. M. which in deede is Belus Mawr, and not Beata Maria, as they would falsely beare men in hand, to delude our aunient Genea-logies, & discredit the whole nation. This Beli the great raigned ouer this land 60. yeeres, leauing behind him 3 sonnes, Lludh, Kaswalhawn, and Nyniaw.

Lludh, eldest son of Beli the great, after the death of his father, was made K. of this land: he renewed the walles of newe Troy, and called the City after his owne name, Caerludh & builded there a gate, & called the same Ludis-gate, & after hee had gouerned this land worthily 11. yeres, he dyed, & was buried at Caerludh neere vnto the gate, which hee had builded, leauing behind him foure yong sonnes, who because they were not, by reason of their minority, able to take charge of the gouernment, left the same to their vncle Kaswalhawn.
